Life Is Amazing

Between them, Ronnessa and Dario Brown had four jobs; now they have none.

by Wendy Rudman

Ronnessa and Dario Brown don't have to look far to see how their lives have changed since being introduced to It Works! last year. They are both home full time with their children, they travel the world together, and living paycheck to paycheck is nothing more than a memory. "Money is not an issue," Ronnessa says. "Life is amazing."

Perhaps most rewarding of all, they were able to provide for Ronnessa's mother after she was laid off just short of retirement. "I was able to move her from New Jersey to Washington, D.C., buy her a fully furnished apartment with all amenities," Ronnessa says. "She just walked in with her clothes." Ronnessa, whose parents split up when she was 13, feels blessed to be living close to her mom again. "I prayed and prayed and prayed ever since I was a kid for my mom to come back. I feel like God's timing was perfect."

Motivation to Succeed

Ronnessa, who was a teen mom at 16 and had three kids by age 25, says she never stopped dreaming. "People look at you differently," she says. "They look at you and say, 'Why is she having all those kids. She's never going to be anything.'" But what people don't realize is that her kids gave her the motivation to keep working hard and accomplish her goals. "I knew I was going to be successful and I was going to teach my kids," she says. "They gave me the drive to work hard."

'Addicted' to Helping Others

The couple went from working multiple jobs and barely getting by to saving six-figures last year alone. Three months after discovering It Works!, Ronnessa was able to quit her full-time job to work the business full-time. Dario quit his two government jobs as well. "I'm addicted to making people successful, making their confidence go up," she says. "Making people's lives over physically, financially. I'm addicted to that. A lot of people don't know what their worth is. A lot of people settle. I make sure people know they can have 10 times more if they go out and work for it." SIH
