

The Future's So Bright

Kaye Sowder and her husband look forward to a debt-free life limited only by their dreams.

Most college students graduate dreaming of a career and plan to repay their student loans. Kaye Sowder graduated, began her own It Works! business, and earned a five-figure monthly income as her starter salary.

Soon after, Jeremy Foster joined Kaye in her venture and the couple worked toward Jeremy's retirement from the restaurant business. Because he had vacationed only three weeks in a 13-year career, travel was a top priority. "We plan to travel to Europe to visit some of our favorite places such as Austria, France, England and Italy," Kaye says.

Freedom to Make the Day Yours

The freedom to carve the day into chosen activities instead of spending time at a job is something Kaye shares with her team. "We are humbled we get to surround ourselves with like-minded individuals who value what freedom really means," Kaye explains. "They are success-driven and committed to fun!"

Part of that fun means shopping for a vacation home in Florida near family and restoring classic cars. Having paid off their everyday vehicles, Jeremy enjoys restoring his classic Jeep and Blazer. Jeremy was always saying "no" to the activities that weren't required, but now he gets to say "yes" to his life.

"He can play golf, enjoy quality time with his family and pursue his favorite hobbies," Kaye elaborates.

Walking the Journey Together

But it's their effort as a couple and as leaders of a team that enables them to realize their dreams of time and financial freedom.

"Jeremy and I realize this journey is not all about us. We love and adore the things we have. We love the journey we're on. We also know we would not be here without our team," Kaye says. "Our goal is to lead and inspire our team members to accomplish their dreams and desires along the way."

Leading by example, Kaye and her husband look to the future—to their plans for travel and children, and to check marks by all the dreams on their board. SIH
