IT FELT AMAZING TO KNOW
I COULD QUIT MY JOB AND STILL HAVE FINANCIAL SECURITY.

Grateful for the Opportunity

Kirsten and Brett Johnson love working from home and being full-time parents.

by Nicole Bywater

After their son Rylan was born three and half years ago, Kirsten Johnson saw It Works! as a chance to work from home and not have to return to her job as a physical education teacher. After just a few months in the business, she replaced her teaching income.

"Working from home really appealed to me because I wanted to be there with my son, and the products fit my background as a promoter of fitness and health," Kirsten says. "It felt amazing to know I could quit my job and still have financial security."

Financial Freedom and More

Before joining It Works!, she and her husband Brett enjoyed a comfortable lifestyle, but never had extra money to put in savings. Teachers in Canada make decent salaries, Kirsten explains, and Brett earned a nice income from his job in the oil fields. But that income came at the cost of a physically and mentally draining job that kept Brett on the road a lot. That's all changed, thanks to It Works!.

Brett has now quit his oil field job to join Kirsten in It Works!. Their second son, Jayce, was born this past November and both parents enjoy working from home. In addition to their new lifestyle, the Johnsons' extra income allows them to do things they couldn't have done in the past. Brett paid cash for his new Dodge diesel truck. The couple has nearly paid off their current home and has a significant savings plan set up to buy their dream lake house, debt-free.

A Different Experience

Financial freedom is great, Brett says, but the real icing on the cake is the fact that both he and Kirsten are present full time in their young sons' lives.

"After our first son was born, I went back to work just one week later," he recalls. "It's been completely different this time, and I'm so grateful for the opportunity. I don't take any of this for granted because I know what it's like to be on the other side of the fence." SFH
